

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Columbia River highway; to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

Mr. Newlands of Nevada: A bill (S. Res. 172) looking to the restoration of peace in Europe; ordered to lie on the table; referred to Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. Padgett of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 12835) to authorize and empower officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps to serve under the government of the Republic of Haiti, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs; H. Rept. 313; debated; amended and passed House; referred to Senate Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. Page of Vermont: A bill (S. 5502) to establish courts of arbitration; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Phelan of California: A bill (S. J. Res. 122) reaffirming the faith of the United States in the peaceful settlement of international disputes by all reasonable and honorable means; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. Sherwood of Ohio: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 35) to provide for the settlement of international disputes by arbitration; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

National.

Mr. Chilton of West Virginia: A bill (S. 5126) giving the consent of the United States for the bringing of certain suits in the Supreme Court of the United States, and for other purposes; from Committee on the Judiciary; debated.

Mr. Emerson of Ohio: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 219) against removal of United States forces from Mexico; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska: A bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands; to the Committee on the Philippines; S. Rept. 18; debated; made the unfinished business of the Senate; amended and passed Senate; referred to House Committee on Insular Affairs; reported back (H. Rept. 499); debated; amended and passed House; House insists on its amendments and asks for a Conference; motion to instruct conferees agreed to; Conference appointed.

Mr. Saulsbury of Delaware: A bill (S. 4014) to supplement existing legislation relative to the United States Court for China and to increase the serviceability thereof; to the Committee on Foreign Relations; S. Rept. 101; amended and passed Senate; referred to House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Tavenner of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 15385) to authorize the Director of the Bureau of the Census under certain conditions to prepare and distribute blank ballots and to receive and count marked ballots and report to Congress the result of an advisory vote; to the Committee on the Census.

(This bill provides for a popular referendum before declaration of war.)

Neutrality.

Mr. Clark of Florida: A bill (H. R. 12045) to prevent the employment of aliens and naturalized citizens in certain cases and to prescribe punishment for its violation; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Rodenberg of Illinois: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 202) laying an embargo on arms, ammunition, and war supplies; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

BOOK REVIEWS AND PAMPHLETS RECEIVED

The Great Solution: Magnissima Charta. By Henri La Fontaine, Senator of Belgium, Professor of International Law, recipient of the Nobel Prize. Boston: World Peace Foundation. 187 p. Single copies, postpaid, $1.25.

This book is written out of a profound faith that humanity can develop institutions which shall eventually function as a substitute for war, and that these institutions will be developed out of institutions already existing. The author outlines a suggestive convention to be signed by the states at the close of the war. The articles of the convention are developed out of conventions already agreed upon. The problems to be solved at the end of the war are clearly set before us. Diplomatic and Parliamentary procedures are combined and provision is made for definite action by a majority. The book may be obtained from the American Peace Society.

The Diplomacy of the Great War. By Arthur Bullard. New York: The Macmillan Company. 344 p., with bibliography and index. $1.50 net.

Mr. Bullard calls his book "a first-year course in European diplomacy," but it is more than that. It represents an admirably clear, comprehensive and impartial outline of the otherwise confusing interlacings of diplomacy and diplomatic chicanery and deviousness that led up to, if they did not actually bring about, the present struggle. Its seriousness is pleasantly relieved with a sauce of sagacious humor. Perusing it with the care which it deserves, we come to an understanding of the author's assertion that: "Most European history of the last thirty years could be compressed into two statements: The non-Germanic peoples felt that it was not only their right but their most sacred duty to resist the encroachments of the Deutschum. The Germans could not conceive how any but idiots and perverts could resist the realization of their beneficent and reforming mission." It is no exaggeration to say that every reader interested in peace in whose mind that thirty years' history is not clearly recorded should read this book. Accurate knowledge of the diplomatic steps that led to the war insures the best understanding of the difficulties of peace today. Mr. Bullard writes exclusively from the basis of fact, and his outlook is an optimistic one.

What Is Coming? By H. G. Wells. New York: The Macmillan Company. 294 p. $1.50.

Mr. Wells is again Mr. Wells, delightedly absorbed with an acre of clean white canvas and a large, splashy paint brush. He is here writing in the rôle of prophet, attempting his favorite task, a history of the future. "The prophetic type," he maintains, "will steadfastly refuse to see the world as a museum; it will insist that here is a stage set for a drama that continually begins." "The world is a supersaturated solution of the will-for-peace," he declares, "and there is nothing for it to crystallize upon." "There is no real peace but the peace of the whole world." His three dominant characteristics are again visible here: loose writing, a startling immensity of conjecture, and, every now and then, the glint of extraordinarily apt characterization. To the pacifist reader his work gives a stimulus to the imagination, even when the reaction may take the form of decided opposition to his views. As mental gymnastics, to offset the hearty meal that Mr. Bullard's book provides, Mr. Wells' book is highly commendable.

Why War? By Dr. Frederic C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration, Port of New York. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. 1916. 366 p. $1.50 net.

Closely reasoned upon the basis of the contention that wars are made by the conflicting interests of surplus capital seeking profits in foreign markets, Dr. Howe's new book should succeed in provoking much keen discussion among students of international relations. The argument leaves the impression of having disregarded some racial and political causes of war, in the endeavor at an unmodified exposure of the dangers of financial imperialism. Nevertheless, the interesting review